

On June 9, 2008, the Boston Society of Architects and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology bring together leading U.S. and international experts for Mass Impact, the final half of the two-part symposium addressing cities and climate change at the MIT Tang Center in Cambridge.

Visit www.architects.org/massimpact to register.

Symposium 2: "Energy & Mobility in the Green City"

KEYNOTE ADDRESS

Nicky Gavron deputy mayor of London, 2004–2008

SPEAKERS INCLUDE

Adèle Naudé Santos FAIA dean of the MIT Department of Architecture

Hon. Denise Simmons mayor of Cambridge

Patrick Dolberg president and CEO of Holcim US

Philip Jessup director of Toronto Atmospheric Fund

Joyce Coffee director of project development research and policy for Chicago's Department of the Environment

Ariella Maron deputy director of the NYC Mayor's Office of Long-Term Planning and Sustainability

Andrew Blum contributing editor to Metropolis and Wired magazines

Robin Chase founder and CEO of GoLoco

William Mitchell director of the MIT Design Laboratory

Trent Lethco principal and senior planner at Arup

Keith Collins senior policy advisor to Manitoba Government on Climate Change and Clean Energy Development

Jay Wickersham FAIA partner of Noble and Wickersham LLP

James Hunt chief of environmental and energy services for the City of Boston

James Gordon president of Cape Wind Associates

AND MORE—check the website for updates

Sponsored by

Additional support by City of Boston, United Technologies, UK Trade & Investment, Sasaki Associates Inc., Consulate General of Canada in Boston, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency—New England Office, Arup, Goulston & Storrs—Boston, Massachusetts Smart Growth Alliance, ArchitectureBoston, Boston Foundation for Architecture and MIT's Department of Architecture. Organized by the Boston Society of Architects and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

